

Micro Chipping

Microchipping is a legal requirement in England for both dogs and cats. They should have a microchip implanted before leaving the breeder or rescue centre. If not, it is important you get this done ASAP.

Microchipping is very helpful in reuniting lost pets and owners. Microchips implanted are generally readable by most dog wardens / rescue centres and veterinarians. It is extremely important that you keep your personal details up to date with the pet microchip database your pet is registered too. If you do not know which database your pet is registered with, please book an appointment with one of our nurses and we will be able to help.

It is possible to microchip most, if not all, species of animal. Please contact White Mill for more information.
